About the LIBER Journées

The LIBER Journées is a tailored scientific programme designed for 20-25 Library Directors who are already in leadership positions in their institutions and who are looking ahead at delivering strategic change as libraries and institutions redefine themselves in an ever-changing information and social environment.

The programme brings participants together with eminent global speakers for a stimulating, interactive, and strategic programme, addressing major challenges that face us all. It concentrates on strategic matters and challenges which may be illustrated by operational matters and practical examples.

Welcome

Welcome to the Library and Information Centre of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences and to the LIBER Journées.

On behalf of LIBER and the Library and Information Centre of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, we hope you have an inspiring and productive time. Please enjoy the informative presentations by the excellent speakers we have invited from libraries and academia.

We are confident that your participation will open up new and exciting perspectives for your libraries and universities.

Lastly, you can be sure that the LIBER Journées will help you enhance your role as leaders and change agents in the transformation of higher education and research.

Hilde Van Kiel

Chair of the LIBER Working Group on Leadership Programmes
Library Director, KU Leuven Libraries, Belgium

István Monok

Director General
Library and Information Centre of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences,
Budapest

Andreas Brandtner
Programme Coordinator, LIBER Journées 2022
Library Director, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany

Strategic Vision

In 2022, the LIBER Journées brings 15 library directors and eminent global speakers together for a stimulating, interactive, and strategic programme, addressing major challenges that face us all. The underpinning theme is: 'Leading Libraries in the World of Openness'. The focus is on the role of the Director in leading library services and provision in rapidly changing digital, research, and educational environments and within a developing trend towards shared – and even outsourced – services.

Strategic Issues & Opportunities

At the heart of the LIBER Journées will be strategic issues and opportunities that challenge and motivate us all. For instance:

- What does openness mean for the library and how can we lead our libraries in the world of openness?
- What is the role of a library and its leaders in a shifting world of instant information, changing scholarly communication, big data digital content, and openness?
- What is the library's role in an increasingly digital shared services environment?
- What value does the library bring to people when dealing with information in the future, for instance, academics, students, journalists, entrepreneurs, citizens?
- How are libraries identified as ethical and scientific information services, and viewed as future key providers by: the university, researchers, lecturers, students?
- How do we manage the image shift between traditional perceptions of libraries and librarians and their leading role with access to open, reliable and high-quality information in the future?
- How do we strengthen networks and dialogue with academic decision makers, researchers, and educators?
- What are the key roles of the library and library staff for supporting research projects during their whole life cycle?
- Is it all about demonstrating values and advocacy or more about political nous, business acumen, thought leadership, and sitting at the top table?
- How can we take advantage of trends in innovation and inspiration to embed libraries more effectively in academic projects and transformations in order to deliver a better information service for the benefit of all?
- How do library leaders participate in shaping and modelling the future of academic research and education through developing high quality and open information services?
- Will COVID-19 advance Open Science?

Chair

Lossau, Norbert

Institution: University of Göttingen

Position: Vice-President for Digitisation and Infrastructures

Email: vizepraesident-digitalisierung@uni-goettingen.de

Website: <http://www.uni-goettingen.de>

Norbert Lossau's portfolio on the University Board includes the State and University Library (SUB Göttingen) and the Computing Centre of the University and Max Planck Society, GWDG. He has been responsible to fund the Göttingen eResearch Alliance and the Campus Institute Data Science and has been the co-initiator of the Digital Humanities activities at the University. Currently he coordinates among other the activities of the new University Museum ("Forum Wissen") and the climate plan 2030 of the University.

Norbert Lossau graduated in Finno-Ugrian Studies and Scandinavian Studies at the Universities of Bonn and Göttingen. In 1991, he received his PhD from Göttingen University. In 1996, he completed successfully his academic librarian traineeship. At the Göttingen State and University Library, in 1997, he set up the Göttingen Digitisation Centre, one of two DFG-funded nationwide centres for competence in the digitisation of library holdings.

In 2001, Norbert moved to the UK to become the first Head of the Oxford Digital Library at the University of Oxford. In 2002, he was appointed director of the Bielefeld University Library; in 2006, director of Göttingen State and University Library. In 2011, he was awarded an Honorary Professorship to the Berlin School of Library and Information Science from the Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin.

Norbert has been a member of a number of national and European committees, including the Working Group "Framework and conditions for data intensive Science", German Council of Science and Humanities, the Expert Group "Science 2.0 / Open Science" of the European University Association (EUA) and the Open Science Policy Platform of the European Commission, the Committees on Digitisation of the Regional Rectors' Conference in Lower Saxony and the German Rectors' Conference (HRK).

Speakers

Fecher, Benedikt

Institution: The Alexander von Humboldt Institute for Internet and Society (HIIG).

Position: Head of Research Programme: Knowledge & Society

Email: benedikt.fecher@hiig.de

Website: <https://www.hiig.de/>

Since 2017, Benedikt Fecher has headed the programme area "Knowledge & Society" at the Alexander von Humboldt Institute for Internet and Society (HIIG) in Berlin. He is an interdisciplinary science studies scholar and investigates the interrelationships between science and society in the context of digitization. His research focus is on data-driven research, research infrastructures, open science and open access, science communication, and the measurement and assessment of societal impact.

In 2017, Benedikt Fecher was scientific officer for open access and research data at the Leibniz Association. He was associated with HIIG for five years as a research associate in the lead project "Opening Science". In 2016, he was also a DARIAH-DE Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for the History of Science. He is a Research Fellow at the German Institute for Economic Research.

In 2017, Benedikt Fecher received his doctorate from the Berlin University of the Arts. Previously, he studied communication science and economics at the University of Erfurt and the University of Ottawa, as well as Culture, Communication and Globalization at the University of Aalborg.

Hauber, Mark E.

Institution: University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA

Position: Harley Jones Van Cleave Professor

Email: mhauber@illinois.edu

Website: www.cowbirdlab.org

Prof. Hauber is a tenured member of the University of Illinois faculty in the Dept. of Evolution, Ecology, and Behavior at the School of Integrative Biology. He was educated at Yale (BS), Cornell (PhD), and UC Berkeley (Miller Fellow), and is an elected fellow of the American Ornithological Society, the Animal Behavior Society, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. By training, he is a behavioral ecologist and an ornithologist, who has published over 350 peer-reviewed articles and three books. As already a frequent peer-reviewer in his field, Dr. Hauber first became involved with the scientific press in 2005, serving for 5 years as an independent editor for a subscription-only behavioral journal. As editor-in-chief for 5 years he also oversaw the transition of another, ornithological journal, from a commercial press to a self-publishing model, that included nearly 50% author-free open access articles upon publication, and 100% open access within 6 months. Finally, he has recently become co-editor-in-chief of the Journal of Field Ornithology, which has just transitioned from a library- and member-subscription model to a fully open access journal in spring 2022.

Prior to moving to Illinois, Dr. Hauber held faculty positions at the University of Auckland and the City University of New York (CUNY), where he was also interim vice provost at Hunter College - CUNY and associate vice-chancellor for research at the central CUNY office. He had also served as editor-in-chief for the Auk: Ornithological Advances, editor for Behavioral Ecology and for Ethology, and associate editor for Marine Biology and for Behavioral Ecology and Sociobiology.
